While I only became acquainted with Denny within the last couple years of his life, I considered him (as well as Betty and Melissa) a member of my family. A true character, who never lost his sense of humor or shied away from being completely and brutally honest with his friends and family. I visited Dennis in the Rehab Hospital on one occasion and after about ten minutes, he said: “well, I think it’s time you should go. I’m tired and I’d like to be alone.” A follower of Jesus, I’m comforted (as his family should be) knowing I will see him again on Heaven’s bright shore where all will be as our Creator intended - a return to an Eden-like, perfect environment where we we will walk with and worship our King Jesus for eternity.
