“ I was so shocked to read about Andy's accident a few minutes ago in today's paper. I loved having him in class; he was a good student when he wanted to be. He always had a smile and a story to tell.

Please accept my sincere sympathy. God be with you all.

“ Andy has been a part of our lives for some time now, but within the last year we all grew much closer as he truly became a part of our family. Andy was a dear young man who was always helpful, loving and kind. He brought much happiness to our little corner of the world. We will miss him not only at our family holidays and get togethers but also every single day. Our thoughts and prayers are with his family.

“ Andy,
You were a good son. I could not be any more proud of you than I am. You were a good kid and you were developing into such a fine young man. It seems so tragic that this happened in the prime of your life, but you will live on in our hearts, in our memories, and in our conversations. You left a great legacy and big shoes to fill.

*I love you son,
Dad*

“ They say, "Friends are the family you choose for yourself". I was lucky enough to have Andy as a friend and eventually, he became part of our family. I loved Andy not only as a friend but as a person. He was so smart and a wonderful guy to be around. He was kind and caring and intelligent. He was truly a good person. I am proud to have known Andy. He made fun with everything he did and for everyone around him. When I picture his kind, smiling face I think of all the memories I shared with him and how he touched my life. I cherish the times I spent with Andy and will remember them always.
