“ Snowflake and I were playmates from age 4. Our birthdays were just 2 days apart, so the fun was doubled. Across the street from each other, there was always a playmate available. We rode tricycles in the driveway-no sidewalks in Sanger then. We played dolls and paper dolls, Monopoly, Pollyanna, Chinese checkers, and pickup sticks all summer long. We didn't have a swimming pool but we had a wheelbarrow and a water hose with an adjustable nozzle. We rode bicycles in a little-girl gang all over Sanger, descending on various mothers in search of ice water or-even better-Kool-Aid! We played dress up with castoffs from moms. Many summer nights saw moms gathered in lawn chairs in someone's front yard gossiping while we kids played hide and seek in the dark, or lay in the grass watching the stars. A wonderful shared childhood with a truly sweet friend. I'll miss my oldest playmate.
